Course Overview

In this course, we will learn about world history at the level of the region, considering how physical geography shapes (and is shaped by) economic, social, and political relations within different regions, why different regions have developed (or been underdeveloped) in different ways, and how the world’s regions have influenced each other at a global scale. We will work primarily from a textbook—a PDF of which will be posted on Blackboard—that will take us across ten distinct regions: Europe; the Russian Federation, Central Asia, and the Transcaucasus; the Middle East and North Africa; Sub-Saharan Africa; the U.S. and Canada; Latin America and the Caribbean; East Asia; South Asia; Southeast Asia; and Oceania.

As we move across these different regions, we will consider how the unique histories of specific places are tied to broader, more general experiences, and vice versa—how the particular and the universal are indelibly linked. We will practice thinking critically about current events by contextualizing and historicizing them. By the end of the course, students will have begun developing the tools to answer what Ruth Wilson Gilmore identifies as the fundamental question of the geographer: “Why do things happen where they do?”

Grading

Participation (30%) – Students are expected to show up to every class on time, having done the reading, prepared to contribute to class discussion. That being said, life gets in the way: trains get delayed; your boss holds you late at work; families have emergencies. Unexplained absences will be counted against your participation score, so if you need to miss a class, please let me know ahead of time.

Also, students will be required to post on Blackboard once per chapter. Students may start a thread with a discussion question or reply to someone else’s thread. By “discussion question,” I really do mean a question for discussion—that is to say, not a question whose answer may be readily looked up on Google, but one that may require some further research, theorization, or speculation. While reading, something may make you sit up and think: “But how? And why?”
There—you have found the beginning of a discussion question. Likewise, if you have a lingering curiosity about material covered in the lecture, or something is unclear, articulate that as a discussion question. You’re probably not the only one wondering about it!

Finally, you are expected to read the questions that others post. If one is compelling, you should respond; this will count towards your post quota. In turn, if someone’s response is stimulating or provocative to you, engage with them—always with respect, patience, and care. On class days dedicated to group discussion, we will use the most interesting and lively threads from Blackboard as a jumping-off point.

Three passes will be allowed. As there are 11 chapters, this means students must post eight times throughout the semester. This counts for half of your participation grade; attendance is the other half.

Quizzes (30%) – There will be four short, multiple-choice quizzes posted on Blackboard throughout the semester. They will be open notes and open book. You will have seven days to complete each quiz. Quizzes will be posted online after class on the following days:

- Friday, February 10 – First Quiz (World Regions; Europe)
- Friday, March 17 – Second Quiz (Russian Federation, Central Asia, and the Transcaucasus; Middle East and North Africa; Sub-Saharan Africa)
- Tuesday, April 4 – Third Quiz (U.S. and Canada; Latin America and the Caribbean)
- Friday, April 28 – Fourth Quiz (East Asia; South Asia)

Final Exam (40%) – The final exam will be posted to Blackboard on Wednesday, May 17. You will have seven days to complete the final exam.

Email Policy

Please feel free to email me with any questions you have about the class, about the readings, about my own research—anything at all! However, if you do so, please use your @myhunter email address, and please include “GEOG 15000” in the subject line. On weekdays, I will respond within 24 hours, but please allow me 48 hours over the weekend.

Names and Pronouns

Everyone has the right to be addressed and referred to in accordance with their personal identity. In this class, you will have the chance to indicate the name that you prefer to be called and to identify pronouns with which you would like to be addressed. I will do my best to address and refer to all students accordingly and support classmates in doing so as well.
